General

Alarm groups are used to organize the devices of a Kentix system. The ability to nest alarm groups allows the Kentix system to be formed into a logical or structural representation of its location. Alarm and notification settings can be inherited between alarm groups, which simplifies the configuration of parts of the system.